Biography

Christopher Windsor is a glass sculptor born in British Columbia, Canada. His background in chemical engineering brings a unique perspective to how he views his medium and its limitless bounds. Knowing the chemistry behind the medium has allowed Windsor to experiment with color in ways other have not, playing off its elements in fascinating ways. Between the science of glass and his understanding of how light interacts with the material, he has made significant strides in lighting and other aspects of large scale installation. His vision for grand projects sets him apart from other lampworkers and sculptors enables him to consistently increase upon his past works. Always in a search for new ways to play with the medium, Windsor continues to exceed even his own expectations.
